

Abstract for “Being and Doing as One Body: Perspectives on Catholic and Reformed Worship” (Joyce Zimmerman)

In the last fifty years ecumenism has made giant leaps toward mutual recognition and acceptance of Roman Catholicism and Reformed Protestantism, especially with respect to their respective worship traditions. What we have in common, especially with respect to Baptism and Eucharist/Lord’s Supper, can be a springboard for moving beyond what still separates us.